The Caves Process for External Embalming

J. Thomas & Son have secured the new caves process of embalming which has revolutionized the art of embalming. J. Thomas & Son have taken the necessary examinations and are now thoroughly qualified to apply the new method in all cases where it is desired. The recent discovery of caves process in a school of anatomy, sanitary science and embalming provides the most marked innovation in the art of preserving dead bodies. It is more a matter of process than a fluid, as had been the case under all other methods. By the use of caves process perfectly successful treatment is secured in the outward application of a chemical which penetrates the tissues of the body and acts as a preservative for all time without making a single incision with a knife. No knives or cutting instruments of any kind are used, no arteries are injected and the body and all of its organs are left absolutely natural as in life. This new method has been put to the severest possible tests, not only as to the restoration of decomposed bodies to the natural life-like color, but also in their perfect preservation, as in some cases where the funeral, for family reasons, was postponed for a month after the death and embalming had occurred. Its introduction in Monett and vicinity will naturally be a matter of general interest.

Fine Pastures Dying Out

"There is no grass for pasture like blue stem prairie," Newt Hall, a cattleman of Muskogee, Ok., said last night at the Union Depot. "But it is gradually dying out by over-pasturing and plowing up, and there is no way of reseeding it because the seed is small and scattered over the stalk. Besides, there is no machine made which will thresh it. If some inventor can make a machine to thresh out prairie grass seed he can make a fortune."—Kansas City Times.

Reduction in Fire Insurance

On July 9th there was made a reduction of rates on dwelling insurance by the association of underwriters in 585 towns in Missouri. Under the new rating the dwelling insurance in Monett is 5 per cent less than the former rate. This will make a large saving in this city alone. The low fire record in the past and the efficient fire department service of the city is largely responsible for the reduction.
